INTERNATIONAL DOCUMENTARY CHALLENGE PARTNERS WITH FUSION NETWORK TO LAUNCH NEW DOC CHALLENGE

Top 12 films Premiere at our Slamdance event and Feature Across Fusion Platforms

$4,500 Awarded

18-month exclusive television deal

All for a film made in just five days!

The International Fusion Documentary Challenge seeks young filmmakers from around the world to create short documentaries (4-7 minutes) in five days from start to finish. Filmmakers get to choose the five days they would like to make their film between now and November 5, 2014. Contestants will be given the theme of this year's challenge and get to choose between two given genres. The top 12 films as determined by an esteemed panel of judges will premiere at The Fusion Doc Challenge premiere at Slamdance in January 2015. Winners are awarded $4,500. The top 20 films receive an exclusive 18-month exclusive licensing deal with Fusion and will feature across Fusion's broadcast and digital platforms. The entry fee is $125.

About The International Documentary Challenge

Embarking on its 10th year, The International Documentary Challenge is an annual timed filmmaking competition where filmmakers from around the globe have 5 days to make a short documentary. In addition to being restricted on time, the filmmakers choose between 2 assigned documentary genres and are assigned a specific theme. An elite industry jury determines the top 12 films. Doc Challenge films screen on television, at film festivals, on TheAudienceAwards.com and receive Emmy nods.
